IT'S been an interesting two months with the launch of the Paranormal Pages. We've had loads of feedback about the look and feel of this new section and we'll be making gradual improvements as we go. Please keep your feedback coming; along with readers' stories, events and any news you feel belongs here. We're dead keen to keep this section growing and expanding.

With Father's Day coming up, let's get into the vibe: "What do you call a haunted chicken? A poultry-geist." Yes, I know, it's a foul joke!

Got a haunted tale, a business that goes bump in the night, or just want to be seen by folks who get it. This is your spotlight. On top of that, we have a Paranormal Pages Sponsor in Haunted Hardware. Check out their amazing range of spooky gear by clicking on their ad or on the logos through the Pages!

There's nothing scary about a bit of exposure, unless you're a vampire. **$

Q: As a Paranormal Investigator, what tools do you use?

WE asked Soula Raven Vaitis from Paranormal Adventures Australia for her thoughts on the question. Each issue we'll pose your questions to our experienced panel. Send your questions to:

editor@supernalmagazineaustralia.com.au

A: I particularly like working with dowsing rods, not in the traditional way that most in the paranormal field use them.

I experiment by putting them upright in a frame or holder that can allow them to operate without them being in your hands. That way there are no other influences, such as our own energy or thoughts, to move them. Then, when they move, I know they are responding intelligently and that I definitely have made contact and am interacting with a spirit entity.

The REM (Radiating Electro-Magnetism) pod is another piece of equipment I choose to use. This has the ability to detect disturbances in its own electromagnetic field including temperature changes. Some think it works similarly to a K2 meter or a cat ball, both of which can detect motion. To a degree it does, yet its sensitivity is stronger and, in my experience, easier for spirits to manipulate.

Of course, I always have a voice recorder going. You just never know what you may capture that is beyond physical hearing.

Haunted Hardware Turns ONE!

IT'S great to be supporting a new business in Australia, especially one that is focussed on the paranormal. Reaching every milestone under the current conditions here in Australia, especially in Melbourne, needs to be celebrated with some fanfare – I mean every first birthday does!

From the team at Supernal, we wish David Nesbit from Haunted Hardware a Happy Birthday and we hope to see many more into the future. Checkout his beaut range of gear at www.hauntedhardware.com.au.

AsylumFest Returns to Beechworth in 2025

Australia's only horror pop-culture festival is back! It's creeping into Beechworth's notorious Mayday Hills asylum from October 24 to 26, 2025.

Known as AsylumFest, this annual fright-fest transforms the historic 1800s asylum into a playground of horror, oddities and eerie delights. The weekend kicks off on Friday night with a chilling feature film screening inside the haunted halls, often paired with Q&As from horror filmmakers and special guests.

Saturday and Sunday see the asylum grounds explode with activity. The main hall hosts a sprawling traders' market packed with collectibles, creepy crafts and festival-only oddities. Visitors can join workshops on horror writing, prop-making and SFX makeup, while brave souls can join spine-tingling ghost tours or take part in immersive paranormal experiences.

A festival highlight is the ghost-story competition in the Bijou Theatre on Saturday night, where storytellers battle for chills, cheers and cash prizes.

THE GIFT OF A KISS

By Jane Offer

There are moments in life when the veil between this world and the next feels impossibly thin. A song plays at just the right time, a feather drifts across your path, a fragrance fills the air with no earthly source and, in that instant, you know you are not alone. Yet so often, people dismiss these subtle visitations as mere coincidence. Others refute them altogether, insisting that there is nothing beyond that which we can measure and explain.

HOWEVER, based on the events of my life, I cannot agree. Evidence has been scattered or I should say, woven through, with experiences too precise, too tender, too unmistakably timed to ignore. From a young child I had the memory of another family, an Indian mum and dad with three children. Now, we are talking about England in the 1940's remember, so very few people of unfamiliar cultures had arrived on our shores and none in the country towns and villages around my birthplace. I waited for a long time believing this family would come and find me, yet I had to wait until I was 45 for that story to play out.

My mother was totally against any sort of spirit talk, including religion and I could not understand why. I could see people around her, especially a gentle looking man. Years later, when I finally saw a picture of her birth father, I realised with a shock that he was the same man I had seen by her side. Eventually, I learned that my grandmother had attended séances and taken my mother along as a child. No wonder she turned her back on it all; she had been taught to fear.

Over the ensuing years, in my need to make sense of 'knowing' and 'seeing' what others couldn't, I explored everything from various faith, Ouija boards, tarot cards and discussions with anyone I came across that felt as I did. It led me into so many adventures as I discovered that Spirit has a way of reaching through, without fanfare and drama, simply with gentle nudges of reassurance. A dream that carries a message. A sudden memory sparked just when you need encouragement. A sign that answers the question you hadn't dared to speak aloud. These are not random happenings. To me, they are proof that those who love us never really leave.

Wholeheartedly, I believe that spirit is present, aware of both our joys and our deepest struggles. They celebrate with us in moments of triumph and they reach out in times of pain. While not everyone chooses to notice and, while many will rationalise these encounters away, the truth is that these quiet miracles are happening all around us. They are gifts of comfort, offered freely, meant to remind us that love does not die and that we are guided more than we realise. In fact, they proved to me that I was never alone in all areas of life.

One, a recent happening, was so poignant to me that I would like to share it with you. Not to convince you, you understand. Why would I when it is my experience? I want to share that there is always hope, the greatest gift we have been granted. I want to reassure you that, should you have ever wondered whether there is more to life than what we perceive, there is. You are not imagining it.

So, here we are, my story, which is engraved in my mind and heart forever.

My daughter was diagnosed with breast cancer, an enormous shock, as it was a condition that had never appeared in our family. After much discussion with doctors, she chose her own treatment path, asking questions and making decisions with clarity and courage. As a natural health practitioner, I supported her choices while beginning our own complementary approach.

“Feeling let down and dejected I turned and there, on the steamy shower screen, was the imprint of a kiss.”

Mostly, I stayed strong yet, at one point I fell into a dark place of fear and I broke. That day, after a particularly sleepless night, I stepped into the shower and asked Spirit for guidance and assurance. Normally, I would receive a feeling or a quiet inner voice. This time - nothing. I felt abandoned.

Feeling let down and dejected I turned and there, on the steamy shower screen, was the imprint of a kiss. Perfect lips pressed against the glass, leaving behind love and encouragement. The position on the glass made no sense; it would have required impossible agility. As the steam cleared, the kiss faded, yet the message was clear: all would be well.

That was enough for me to brighten up and regain my positive mood. However, that beautiful spirit was not done with me. Every day, that kiss appeared on the shower screen. However often I cleaned the glass screen, on both sides I might add, there it was. Every day

The day we received the news that my beautiful girl was all clear, I decided to say my 'thank you'. I went into the shower cubicle and, as the glass steamed over there was no kiss, no lip pattern, just a feeling of lightness and love. The message had been delivered, the promise fulfilled.

And that kiss has never returned.

How could I possibly doubt my own evidence? I don't know to this day who left me the kiss, as none of my departed family members had lips that distinctive and full. Though I may never know the giver of that kiss, I do know they came with love. In return, they are in no doubt of my gratitude.

And I know this: Spirit is with us. Always. My story is not unique as, when I share it, people often reply with their own accounts of visitations.

“...as the glass steamed over there was no kiss, no lip pattern, just a feeling of lightness and love.”

So, take note of the synchronicities that touch your life, as the same support is there for you. Always. $

WELCOME TO PARANORMAL PAGES – BUSINESS & TOUR GUIDE

We're thrilled to launch our very first Paranormal Pages Business & Tour Operators Guide – your gateway to Australia's supernatural scene, state by spine-tingling state!

This is just the beginning. As more of the paranormal community jumps on board, these pages will grow into a full-blown directory of haunted happenings, spooky specialists, and spectral seekers across the country.

Massive thanks to those early believers who backed this vision from the get-go. Your support is helping us bring to life Australia's very own paranormal hub – a place where ghost tours, investigators, psychics, mediums, and metaphysical mavens can all stand proudly under one eerie, Supernal roof.

To our readers: if you love what we're doing, back the businesses backing us. Book a tour, visit a shop, share the word – and help us keep the paranormal alive and thriving.

Got a spooky biz or ghostly gig? Jump on board – the Paranormal Pages are calling!

Email editor@supernalmagazineaustralia.com.au for details on how to join the Paranormal Pages.
